Terrible Neglect.

A little stream of water was seen one day trickling through one of the great Holland dikes which in that country keep the see, with its level many fees above the ground, from inundating the cities. The small leak remained unbeeded, as something too small for notice. The stream gradually enlarged, and finally became a torrent, the dike was larged, and finally became a torrem, the wast em-unifermined, until in a fatal moment the wast em-bankment care was and the great flood of waters bankment gave war and the great flood of waters overwhelmed the city. Careless neglect thus sac-rificed thousands of lives.

By a similar heedless neglect myrisds of lives are sacrificed every year. The appetite Lecomes capticious, there may be headaches or pain in side or back, possibly attended by palpitstion, numbers, trembling, with strange sense tions and wearmess of the limbs. Altogether there is a feeling of both perrons and physical exhaustion, with loss of energy, life and ambition.

Three symptoms and feelings show that the h'a'th is undermined, and that just so surely as they are neglected the strength and vitality of nerre and body will give way and fatal disease resul:.
